

The quality of our home life here in Indiana has improved beyond measure since our Telephone Privacy law went into effect. Before this law we were receiving a dozen or more calls a day -- all 7 days a week, as early as 8:00 a.m. and as late as 10:00 p.m. We had a storm of "hang up" calls due to the auto-dialers rotating before we answered. That was not only irritating, but scary because we didn't know at that time what or who it was. People all over America have suffered this problem and you will never hear from anyone who enjoys getting these calls. We here in Indiana have truly enjoyed privacy at home once again; please think twice before you protect the "rights" of the telemarketers at the cost of the rights of the tax paying, voting, working (as in labor), thinking Americans here in Indiana.
